21. “But madam, how many feelings are there?” “Friend Visakha, there are these three feelings: pleasant feeling, painful feeling, neither painful nor pleasant feeling.”

22. “But madam, what is pleasant feeling, what is painful feeling, what is neither painful nor pleasant feeling?” “Friend Visakha, whichever bodily or mental feeling is pleasant or agreeable, this is pleasant feeling. Friend Visakha, whichever bodily or mental feeling is painful or disagreeable, this is painful feeling. Friend Visakha, whichever bodily or mental feeling is neither agreeable nor disagreeable, this is neither painful nor pleasant feeling.”

From neither painful nor pleasant feeling, what is pleasant, what is painful?” “Friend Visakha, a pleasant feeling is pleasant [when it] persists, painful [while] changing. A painful feeling is painful [when it] persists, pleasant [while] changing. A neither painful nor pleasant feeling is pleasant [when there is] knowledge, painful [when there is] no knowledge.”

feeling?” “Friend Visakha, The underlying tendency to lust lies dormant for pleasant feeling. The underlying tendency to aversion lies dormant for painful feeling. The underlying tendency to ignorance lies dormant for neither painful nor pleasant feeling.”

25. “Really madam, does the underlying tendency to lust lie dormant for all pleasant feelings? Does the underlying tendency to aversion lie dormant for all painful feelings? Does the underlying tendency to ignorance lie dormant for all neither painful nor pleasant feelings?” “Indeed friend Visakha, the underlying tendency to lust does not lie dormant for all pleasant feelings. The underlying tendency to aversion does not lie dormant for all painful feelings. The underlying tendency to ignorance

The underlying tendency to aversion should not be abandoned for all painful feelings. The underlying tendency to ignorance should not be abandoned for all neither painful nor pleasant feelings. Here friend Visakha, quite secluded from sense-desires, secluded from unwholesome dhammas, a bhikkhu enters and dwells in the first jhana, which is with thinking and pondering, with rapture and pleasure born of seclusion, by which he abandons the underlying tendency to lust. The underlying tendency to lust does not lie dormant therein. Here friend Visakha, a bhikkhu considers thus: “O when indeed will I enter upon and dwell in that domain, that which is the domain the noble ones at present enter upon and dwell in?” Thus yearning for the unsurpassed liberations, mental pain arises in dependence on arousing of that yearning, by which he abandons aversion. The underlying tendency to aversion does not lie dormant therein. Here friend Visakha, having given up [bodily] pleasure and pain, and with the disappearance of former mental pleasure and mental pain, a bhikkhu enters upon and abides in the fourth jhana, which is beyond pleasure and pain, with utter purity of mindfulness and equanimity, by which he abandons ignorance. The underlying tendency to ignorance does not lie dormant therein.”

34. But madam, what is the counterpart of nibbana? “Friend Visakha, you have gone beyond questioning. You were unable to grasp the limits of questions. Indeed friend Visakha, the life of purity plunges in nibbana, has nibbana as its final end, nibbana as its conclusion.” But if you wish, friend Visakha, having approached the Auspicious One, you may ask him about the meaning of this. As the Auspicious One explains it, so should you bear it in mind.

madinna's words having rejoiced, having risen up from his seat, having bowed down, having circumambulated the bhikkhuni Dhammadinna, by which [way led to] the Auspicious One, by that way he approached. Having approached the Auspicious One, having bowed down, he sat down to one side. Having sat down to one side, the lay disciple Visakha informed the Auspicious One of the friendly conversation he had with the bhikkhuni Dhammadinna.

36. When thus was said, the Auspicious One said this to the lay disciple Visakha: A wise one, O Visakha, is the bhikkhuni Dhammadinna. Of great wisdom, O visākha, is the bhikkhuni Dhammadinna. And if you would have asked me too, O Visakha, about the meaning of this, I too would have answered just so, as that which the bhikkhuni dhammadinna have answered. This is just the meaning of it, thus, should you remember this.

37. This is what the Auspicious One said. Delighted, the lay disciple Visakha delighted in the Auspicious One's words.
