“Homage to Vipassi,
the glorious one endowed with eyes;
homage to Sikhi too,
compassionate towards all beings.

vipassissa namatthu
cakkhumantassa sirīmato sikhissa pi namatthu sabbabhūtānukampino.

Homage to Vessabhu,
the trainer of men, ever ardent;
To Kakusandha, homage be the crusher of Mara’s army.

vessabhussa namatthu
nahātakassa tapassino
namatthu kakusandhassa
mārasenāpamaddino

Homage to Konagamana
the Brahmin perfected;
homage to Kassapa,
liberated in all respects.

koṇāgamanassa namatthu
brāhmaṇassa vusīmato, kassapassa namatthu

vippamuttassa sabbadhi.

Homage to the radiant one,
the glorious son of the Sakyans;
he who taught this Dhamma, dispelling all suffering.

aṅgīrasassa namatthu
sakyaputtassa sirīmato
yo imaṃ dhammamadesesi sabbadukkhāpanūdanam

But even those who are extinguished in the world, possessing clear vision of what has come to be;
those never slander any person,
the self-confident ones of great might.

Benefactor of devas and humans, revered is Gotama (the Buddha);
excelling in knowledge and conduct, the self-confident one of great might.

By which way is the charming northern Kuru, the great Mt. Neru, beautiful to behold,
There are humans born in that place, unselfish and possessionless.

They neither sow the seed
nor lead along plows.
Good rice that matures in untilled ground,
is what the humans there enjoy.

Having cooked on hot rocks,
 the finest rice without husk powder or chaff.
 Pure, sweet-smelling grains,
 from that they enjoy their food.

Having made their cows single-hoofed,
 they go about from place to place.
 Having made four-legged animals single-hoofed,
 they go about from place to place.

There are sounds of parrots and myna-birds,
and the dandamanavaka [bird].
Ever shining all the time,
is Kuvera’s perpetual lotus pond.
