20. O Cunda, of all the Teachers who have arisen in the world at present, I do not even see one other Teacher, O Cunda, who has attained to such peak of gain and peak of fame as I have. O Cunda, of all the orders or groups that have arisen in the world at present, I do not even see one other order, O Cunda, that has attained to the peak of gain and to the peak of fame as my bhikkhu Sangha. O Cunda, that which [one] correctly saying would say: “A life of purity that is complete in all aspects, with nothing lacking and nothing superfluous, well-proclaimed in its completeness and purity,” [it would be of] just this life of purity [that one] correctly saying would say: “A life of purity that is successful in all aspects, with nothing lacking and nothing superfluous, well-proclaimed in its completeness and purity.”

21. O Cunda, even Uddaka Ramaputta, [used to] utter such saying: “Seeing, he does not see.” “But what is it that seeing, one does not see? You can see the blade of a well-sharpened razor, but not its edge. That is what was meant by Uddaka Ramaputta, O Cunda, when saying: “Seeing, he does not see.” He spoke in reference to a low, vulgar, for puthujjanas, ignoble, unbeneficial thing, a mere razor.” O Cunda, that which [one] correctly saying would say: “Seeing, he does not see,” [it would be of] just this [that one] correctly saying would say: “Seeing, he does not see.”

22. “And what is it that seeing, one does not see?” Indeed, this is truly what he sees: “A life of purity that is successfull in all aspects, complete in all aspects, with nothing lacking and nothing superfluous, well-proclaimed in its completeness and purity.” If he were to deduct anything from it, thinking: “In this way it will be purer”, then he does not see it. And if he were to add anything to it, thinking: “In this way it will be more complete”, then he does not see it. This is [the proper meaning of] “seeing, he does not see.”

23. O Cunda, that which [one] correctly saying would

O Cunda, are the Dhammas taught by me from higher knowledge which entirely all of you having assembled, having met together at a place, should recite them meaning by meaning, phrasing by phrasing, without any disagreement [in meaning and phrasing], in order that this life of purity may last for a long time, persist for a long time, for the welfare of many, for the happiness of many, out of compassion for the world, for the good, welfare and happiness of devas and humans.

25. And for all of you, O Cunda, having assembled in harmony, without dissension, it should be trained [thus:] A certain [person] in the life of purity might speak the Dhamma in the Sangha. Therein, if it occurs to you all thus: "This venerable simply takes the meaning wrongly, [and]

Of this meaning or this meaning, which is the more suitable for these phrasings?" If he would say thus: "For this meaning, O friend, only these phrasings are more suitable; for these phrasings, only this meaning is more suitable;" he should simply not be dismissed, he should not be disparaged. Not having simply dismissed, not having disparaged, just the correct meaning and phrasing should be carefully and thoroughly explained by you for him.

Here O Cunda, quite secluded from sense-desires, secluded from unwholesome dhammas, [a bhikkhu ] enters upon and abides in the rapture and pleasure born of seclusion, connected with thinking and pondering, the first jhana.

This is the second quest for pleasure.

37. Furthermore, O Cunda, with detachment from rapture, a bhikkhu dwelling mindful and clearly comprehending, looks on with equanimity as he experiences pleasure in the body, of which the Noble Ones say: “He is a mindful one who [looks on with] equanimity, one who dwells in pleasure,” enters upon and abides in the third jhana. the woeful plane, on a fixed course, destined for supreme awakening. This is the first fruit, the first benefit. Furthermore, O friend, from the complete destruction of the three fetters and reduction of greed, hatred and delusion, a bhikkhu is a sakadagami, who having come back only once to this world, makes the end of suffering. This is the second fruit, the second benefit. Furthermore, O friend, from the complete destruction of the five fetters that binds one to the near shore, a bhikkhu comes to be born spontaneously [in the pure abodes]. He is one bound to attained final nibbana in that place, not subject to return from that world. Furthermore, O friend, with the destruction of the asavas, a bhikkhu, having realized for himself with direct knowledge, in this very life, the asava-free mind liberation, wisdom liberation, and hav-
