- Then, by which way [led 1. to] the Auspicious One, by that way the venerable Kaccanagotta approached. Having approached the Auspicious One, having bowed down, he sat down to one side. Having sat down to one side, the venerable Kaccanagotta ever said this to the Auspicious One: "Right view, right view," it is said, O Bhante. "To what extent, O Bhante, is there really right view?"
- 2. Indeed, O Kaccana, the majority [view] the world in dependence on the duality of simply existence and non-existence. But for one who is seeing the very arising of the world with right wisdom as it has come to be,

O Kaccana, that which is the non-existence in the world, does not come to be. For one who is seeing the very cessation of the world with right wisdom as it has come to be, O Kaccana, that which is the existence in the world, does not come to be. Certainly this world, O Kaccana, is mostly in the bondage of engagement, holding and adherence. But such one's mind does not engage, does not hold, does not resolve on engagements and holdings, resolutions, underlying tendency to adherence, "my self." He has no perplexity, no doubt that what arises is only suffering arising, "what ceases is suffering ceasing." Indeed his knowledge of this is independent of others. It is really to that extent, O Kaccana, that there is right view.

"All exists." Indeed, O Kaccana, this is one extreme. "All do not exist." This is second extreme. Not having approached both these extremes, for you O Kaccana, the Tathagata teaches the Dhamma by the middle. "In dependence on ignorance, sankharas come to be. In dependence on sankharas, consciousness comes to be. In dependence on consciousness, name and form come to be. In dependence on name and form, the six sense bases come to be. In dependence on the six sense bases, contact comes to be. In dependence on contact, feeling comes to be. In dependence on feeling, thirst comes to be. In dependence on thirst, holding comes to be. In dependence on holding, being comes to be. In dependence on being, birth comes to be. In dependence on birth, old age and death, sorrow, lamentation, physical suffering,
