0. At Savatthi.

1. Then in the evening time, the venerable Bhumija emerged from seclusion and visited with the venerable Sariputta. Upon arrival, he exchanged friendly greetings with the venerable Sariputta. Having exchanged friendly greetings and cordial talk, he sat down to one side. Having sat down to one side, the venerable Bhumija said this to the venerable Sariputta.

2. There are, O friend Sariputta, some samanas and brahmanas, proponents of kamma, who declare that suffering is made by oneself. Yet there are, O friend Sariputta, some samanas and brahmanas, proponents of kamma, who declare that suffering is made by another. Yet there are, O friend Sariputta, some samanas and brahmanas, proponents of kamma, who declare that suffering is made by both oneself and another. Yet there are, O friend Sariputta, some samanas and brahmanas, proponents of kamma, who declare that suffering is made by neither oneself nor another, but has arisen by chance.

3. “Here now, O friend Sariputta, what is the Auspicious One’s doctrine [on this]? What does he declare? How answering would we [say] just what has been said by the Auspicious One, and not misrepresent the Auspicious One with what is falsehood, and how should we answer

7. The venerable Ananda heard this friendly conversation between the venerable Sariputta and the venerable Bhumija. Then the venerable Ananda visited with the Auspicious One. Upon arrival, having bowed down, he sat down to one side. Having sat down to one side, the venerable Ananda informed the Auspicious One the extent of the friendly conversation between the venerable Sariputta and the venerable Bhumija.

8. Good, good, O Ananda. Rightly declaring, one would declare just as Sariputta [has declared]. Pleasure and pain, O Ananda, have been said by me to be dependently arisen. In dependence on what? In dependence on contact. Declaring thus, one would speak just what is said by me, and not misrepresent me with what is falsehood, and would answer in truth in accordance with the Dhamma,
