sāvatthiyaṃ

1. Having stood at one side, Kamada, son of the devas, said this to the Auspicious One:

ekamantaṃ t̥hito kho kāmado devaputto bhagavantaṃ etadavoca:

“Difficult to do, O Auspicious One, very difficult to do, O Auspicious One.”

“But they do even that which is difficult to do,”
(O Kamada),

those accomplished in virtue and composed,
the sekhas;

“for those gone [forth] into homelessness, who are self-controlled and contented, happiness comes to be.”

dukkaraṃ bhagavā sudukkaraṃ bhagavāti.

dukkaraṃ cāpi karonti (kāmādāti bhagavā), sekhā¹ sīlasamāhitā;

 ʔhitattā anagāriyupetassa,
 tuṭṭhi hoti sukhāvahāti.

“Difficult to gain, O Auspicious One, namely, contentment.”

“Indeed they gain even that which is difficult to gain,” (O Kamada)

“those who by day and by night;
 find delight in the enculturation of the mind, delighting in mental cessation.”

dullabhā bhagavā yadidaṃ tuṭṭhīti. dullabhaṃ vāpi labhanti (kāmadāti bha-gavā),
 cittavūpasame ratā;
 yesaṃ divā ca ratto ca, bhāvanāya rato mano'ti.

“Difficult to rein it in, O Auspicious One, namely,
 the mind.”

“Indeed they rein in even that which is difficult to rein in,” (O Kamada)

“those who delight in calming the faculties;
 having cut off the net of death,
 the noble ones move on [confidently] O Kamada.”

dussamādaham bhagavā yadidaṃ cittanti.

¹sekkhā -syā. ■

dussamādaḥaṃ vāpi samādahanti(kāma-dāti bhagavā),
 indriyūpasame ratā;
 te chetvā maccuno jālaṃ,
 ariyā gacchanti kāmādāti.

“The path is uneven and difficult to move on,
 O Auspicious One.”

“Indeed even that which is uneven and difficult to move on,,
 the noble ones move on, O Kamada;” “the ignoble fall down headfirst onto the uneven path,
 but the path is even for the noble ones,
 for indeed the noble are even among the uneven.”

duggamo bhagavā visamo maggo'ti.
 duggame visame vāpi (bhagavā:), ariyā gacchanti kāmada;
 anariyā visame magge papatanti avaṃ-
 sirā;
 ariyānaṃ samo maggo,
 ariyā hi visame samāti.
