

0.0.1 A Factor of the Path

1. I will teach you the unconditioned, O bhikkhus, and the path leading to the unconditioned. Listen to that and do mind it well. I will speak.

2. And what, O bhikkhus, is the unconditioned? That, O bhikkhus, which is the extinction of lust, the extinction of hatred, the extinction of delusion. This, O bhikkhus, is called the unconditioned.

3. And what, O bhikkhus, is the path leading to the unconditioned? It is just this noble eightfold path, O bhikkhus, this is called the path leading to the unconditioned.

4. “Thus, O bhikkhus, I have taught you the unconditioned. I have taught the path leading to the unconditioned. Whatever should be done, O bhikkhus, by a teacher for his disciples, desiring their welfare, having pity for them, that has been done for you by me, out of compassion. These are the feet of trees, O Cunda, these are empty huts. Meditate, O Cunda, do not be negligent, lest you regret it later. This is our instructions to you.”
