1. Thus was heard by me. At one time the Auspicious One was wandering on tour among the kosalanans with a large Sangha of bhikkhus. Then the Auspicious One, having gone aside from the path at a certain spot, displayed a smile. Then of the venerable Ananda, this occurred. “What is the cause? What is the reason for the Auspicious One’s displaying of a smile? Tathagatas do not display a smile without a cause.” Then the venerable Ananda, having arranged his robe on one shoulder, having stretched out his hands in anjali towards the Auspicious One, said this to the Auspicious One. “What, O Bhante, is the cause? What is the reason for the Auspicious One’s displaying of a smile? Tathagatas do not display a smile without a cause.”

2. “Once upon a time, O Ananda, at this spot was a market town of a village named Vehalinga. It was very successful and prosperous and had many people, crowded with humans. It was this market town of the village, Vehalinga, O Ananda, that the Auspicious One Kassapa, the Arahant, the Supremely Awakened One lived in dependence on. Infact, it was here, O Ananda, that the Auspicious One Kassapa, the Arahant, the Supremely Awakened One, had his monastery. Infact, it was here, O Ananda, that the Auspicious One Kassapa, the Arahant, the Supremely Awakened One, used to sit when advising the bhikkhu Sangha.”

So then, O Ananda, with the passing of the night, King Kiki of Kasi, having caused to prepare excellent hard foods and soft foods in his own home, including specially prepared fine rice from which the black grains have been removed, with numerous sauces and curries, announced to the Auspicious One Kassapa, the Arahant, the Supremely Awakened One. “It is time, O Bhante, the meal is ready.”

16. So then, O Ananda, in the morning, the Auspicious One Kassapa, the Arahant, the Supremely Awakened One, having dressed, having taken bowl and robe, approached King Kiki of Kasi's house. Upon arrival, he sat down on a prepared seat with the bhikkhu sangha. So then, O Ananda, King Kiki of Kasi, with his own hands, served and satisfied the community of bhikkhus headed by the Buddha with excellent hard foods and soft foods. Then, O Ananda, when the Auspicious One Kassapa, the Arahant, the Supremely Awakened One had eaten and removed his hand from the bowl, King Kiki of Kasi, having taken a certain lower seat, sat down to one side. Having sat down to one side, O Ananda, King Kiki of Kasi said this to the Auspicious One Kassapa, the Arahant, the Supremely Awakened One. "O Bhante, may the Auspicious One accept a residence for the rains in Baranasi from me. Such will be of service for the Sangha."

Then, O Ananda, King Kiki of Kasi said this to the Auspicious One Kassapa, the Arahant, the Supremely Awakened One. “Is there for you, O Bhante, any other supporter better than myself?”

18. There is, O great king, a market town of a village named Vehalinga. There a potter by the name of Ghatikara is my supporter, my chief supporter. Here for you, O Great King: [thinking]. “The Auspicious One Kassapa, the Arahant, the Supremely Awakened One does not accept a residence for the rains from me,” there was really a change of mood, there was sadness. For this Ghatikara, the potter, there is not that, and there will not be. Ghatikara, the potter, O Great King, has gone to the Buddha as refuge, gone to the Dhamma as refuge, gone to the Sangha as refuge. Ghatikara, the potter, O Great King, abstains from the killing of living beings, abstains from the taking of what is not given, abstains from misconduct in sensual pleasures, abstains from false speech, abstains from drinking distilled and fermented liquor that are the bases for negligence. Ghatikara, the potter, O Great King, is endowed with confirmed faith in the Buddha, endowed with confirmed faith in the Dhamma, endowed with confirmed faith in the Sangha, endowed with the virtues that are dear to the noble ones. Ghatikara, the potter, O Great King, is devoid of doubt in suffering, devoid of doubt in the origination of suffering, devoid of doubt in the cessation of suffering, devoid of doubt in the path leading to the cessation of suffering.

19. Ghatikara, the potter, O Great King, eats one meal a day, is celibate, is a virtuous one of good character. Ghatikara, the potter, O Great King, abstains from using gems and gold, abstains from using silver and money. Ghatikara, the potter, O Great King, abstains from using pestle. He does not dig the ground with his hands. That which is the broken up clay of a river bank, or that which has been dug up by mice, having taken away in a carrying pole, having made pots, he says thus. “Here, he who wishes, having placed down a bag of rice in return, or a bag of green peas in return, or a bag of chic-peas in return, may carry away [the pot] he desires.”

20. Ghatikara, the potter, O Great King, takes care of his old and blind mother and father. From the complete extinction of the five fetters that binds one to the near shore, Ghatikara, the potter, O Great King, comes to be born spontaneously [in the pure abodes]. He is one bound to attained final nibbana in that place, not subject to return from that world.

O great king, in the morning, having dressed, having taken bowl and robe, approached Ghatikara, the potter's mother and father. Having approached, I said this to Ghatikara, the potter's mother and father. "Well now, where has Bhaggava gone?" "Your supporter, O Bhante, has gone out. Having taken rice from the pot, having taken curry from the saucepan, eat." So then, I, O Great King, having taken rice from the pot, having taken curry from the saucepan, having eaten, having risen up from my seat, I departed. Then, O Great King, Ghatikara, the potter, approached his mother and father. Having approached, he said this to his mother and father. "Who, having taken rice from the pot, having taken curry from the saucepan, having eaten, having risen up from his seat, has departed?" "It was the Auspicious One Kassapa, my son, the Arahant, the Supremely Awakened One who, having taken rice from the pot, having taken curry from the saucepan, having eaten, having risen up from his seat, has departed." Then, O Great King, for Ghatikara, the potter, this occurred. "Indeed it is a gain for me, it is a great gain for me that the Auspicious One Kassapa, the Arahant, the Supremely Awakened One has confidence in me thus." Then, O Great King, happiness and pleasure did not abandon Ghatikara, the potter for half a month, nor his mother and father for a week.

"Your supporter, O Bhante, has gone out. Having taken porridge from the pot, having taken curry from the saucepan, eat." So then, I, O Great King, having taken porridge from the pot, having taken curry from the saucepan, having eaten, having risen up from my seat, I departed. Then, O Great King, Ghatikara, the potter, approached his mother and father. Having approached, he said this to his mother and father. 23. On this one occasion, O Great King, I was dwelling in the market town of the village, Vehalinga. On that occasion my hut was leaking. Then I, O great king, addressed the bhikkhus. "Go, O bhikkhus, to Ghatikara, the potter's house and find out about grass." When thus was said, O Great King, the bhikkhus said this to me. "There is not grass, O Bhante, at Ghatikara, the potter's house. But there is the grass thatch [roof] on his work-shop." "Go, O bhikkhus, to Ghatikara, the potter's work-shop and take off the thatch [roof]." So then, those bhikkhus, O Great King, took off the thatch [roof] from Ghatikara, the potter's work-shop. Then, O Great King, Ghatikara, the potter's mother and father said this to those bhikkhus. "Who is taking off the thatch [roof] from the work-shop?" The bhikkhus, sister, the Auspicious One Kassapa, the Arahant, the Supremely Awakened One's hut is leaking." "Take it away, O dear Bhante." So then, O Great King, Ghatikara, the potter, approached his mother and father. Having approached, he said this to his mother and father. "Who has taken off the thatch [roof] from the work-shop?" "It was the bhikkhus, my son, the Auspicious One Kassapa, the Arahant, the Supremely Awakened One's hut is leaking, so they say." Then, O Great King, for Ghatikara, the potter, this occurred. "Indeed it is a gain for me, it is a great gain for me that the Auspicious One Kassapa, the Arahant, the Supremely Awakened One has confidence in me thus." Then, O Great King, happiness and pleasure did not abandon Ghatikara, the potter for half a month, nor his mother and father for a week. So then, O Great King, for all that three months [of the rainy season], the work-shop stood with the sky for roof, yet no rain fell in. Such, O Great King, is Ghatikara, the potter.

24. “Indeed it is a gain for Ghatikara, the potter, it is a great gain for Ghatikara, the potter that the Auspicious One Kassapa, the Arahant, the Supremely Awakened One has confidence in him thus.” Then, O Ananda, King Kiki of Kasi, sent five hundred cart loads measure of specially prepared fine rice with the husks removed for Ghatikara, the potter, along with only the suitable curries appropriate for that. Then, O Ananda, those King’s assembly men, having approached, they said this to Ghatikara, the potter. “This, O Bhante, is five hundred cart loads measure of specially prepared fine rice with the husks removed for you, along with just the suitable curries appropriate for that. Please, O Bhante, accept it. The king is busy and has much to be done.” “Mine is enough. Let this be just for the king.”

25. ““Now it may occur to you, O Ananda, that at that time, the brahmin youth, Jotipala, was someone else.” But, O Ananda, this should not be seen thus. At that time I was the brahmin youth Jotipala.”

26. This is what the Auspicious One said. Delighted, the venerable Ananda rejoiced in the Auspicious One’s words.
