

0.0.1 Two Categories of Thoughts

1. Thus was heard by me. At one time the Auspicious One was dwelling at Savatthi in Jeta's Grove, Anathapindikā's Park. At that place the Auspicious One addressed the bhikkhus: "Bhikkhus." "Bhante," those bhikkhus replied to the Auspicious One. The Auspicious One said this:

2. In the past, O bhikkhus, when I was just a bodhisatta, not yet fully awakened to perfect awakening, this occurred to me: "What if I were to dwell having repeatedly put my thoughts into two categories." So I, O bhikkhus, put into one category thoughts of sensual desire, thoughts of ill-will and thoughts of harming; and into the second category thoughts of renunciation, thoughts of non-ill-will and thoughts of non-harming.

It leads to my own affliction, to the affliction of others and to the affliction of both. It impedes wisdom, is on the side of vexation, leads away from nibbana. Because the cowherd sees, O bhikkhus, from that as the source, a punishment, imprisonment, a fine or reproach. So too, O bhikkhus, I saw of unwholesome dhammas the danger, degradation and defilement, and of wholesome dhammas the advantages of renunciation, the position of purity.

8. Of me, O bhikkhus, dwelling thus ever vigilant, ardent and resolute, thoughts of renunciation arose. I wisely understood: This thought of renunciation has arisen in me. It neither leads to my own affliction, nor to the affliction of others nor to the affliction

Just as, O bhikkhus, after the cold season, when all the crops have been collected in the village, a cowherd having gone to the root of a tree or in the open air, would guard the cows simply by keeping in mind: “Here are the cows.” So too, O bhikkhus, there was simply mindfulness: “There are these dhammas.”

13. For me, O bhikkhus, unsluggish energy was aroused. Unmuddled mindfulness was established. My body was tranquil and at ease, my mind was unified and attained to samadhi. Quite secluded from sense-desires, O bhikkhus, secluded from unwholesome dhammas, I entered upon and abided in the happiness and pleasure

When my samadhi was thus purified, cleansed, unblemished, devoid of defilements, malleable, workable, steady, and attained to imperturbability, I directed it to knowledge of the extinction of the asavas. I understood as it has come to be: “This is suffering”; I understood as it has come to be: “This is the origination of suffering”; I understood as it has come to be: “This is the cessation of suffering”; I understood as it has come to be: “This is the path leading to the cessation

When it was liberated there came the knowledge: “It is liberated.” I understood “Birth is extincted, the life of purity has been lived, what had to be done has been done, there is no other for thusness.” This, O bhikkhus, was the third noble knowledge attained by me in the third watch of the night. Ignorance was abandoned, noble knowledge arose. Darkness was abandoned, light arose, as happens for one

18. Suppose, O bhikkhus, that a great community of dear were to live in dependence on a small lake in an extensive valley of a woodland forest. For them some man might arise, one who wishes their harm, one who wishes their ruin, one who wishes for their danger. He would close the path which would be safe, auspicious, leading to happiness. He would open a wrong path, would set up a decoy, and put a tamed and trained female deer on one side. Thus indeed, O bhikkhus, the great community of deer on a later occasion would undergo decimation, ruin and misfortune.

19. However, O bhikkhus, for just that great community of deer, another man might arise, one who wishes their benefit, one who wishes their welfare, one who wishes for their release from bondage. He would open the path which would be safe, auspicious, leading to happiness. He would close the wrong path, destroy the decoy, drive away the tamed and trained female deer. Thus that great community of deer on a later occasion, would undergo increase, growth and abundance.

20. This simile, O bhikkhus, is made by me for conveying a meaning. Just this is the meaning: “Small lake in an extensive valley,” O bhikkhus, this is a designation for sensual pleasures. “The great community of deer,” O bhikkhus, this is a designation for beings. “Man who wishes their harm, ruin and danger,” O bhikkhus, this is a designation for Mara, the Evil One. “Wrong path,” O bhikkhus, this is a designation for the wrong eight-fold path. That is wrong view, wrong thought, wrong speech, wrong action, wrong livelihood, wrong effort, wrong mindfulness, wrong samadhi. “The decoy,” O bhikkhus, this is a designation for lusting after delight. “The tamed and trained female deer,” O bhikkhus, this is a designation for ignorance. “Man who wishes their benefit, welfare and release from bondage,” O bhikkhus, this is a designation for the Tathagata, the arahant, the rightly self-awakened One. “The path which would be safe, auspicious, leading to happiness,” O bhikkhus, this is deer removed. Whatever should be done, O bhikkhus, by a teacher for his disciples, desiring their welfare, having pity for them, that has been done for you by me, out of compassion. These are the feet of trees, O bhikkhus, these are empty huts. Meditate, O bhikkhus, do not be negligent, lest you regret it later. This is our instructions to you.”

22. This is what the Auspicious One said. Delighted, those bhikkhus rejoiced in the Auspicious One’s words.
