

0.0.1 Rise up

1. On one occasion a certain bhikkhu was dwelling at Kosala in a certain forest grove. At that time that bhikkhu, having gone for his daytime abiding, fell asleep. So then, a deva inhabiting that forest grove, out of compassion for that bhikkhu, wishing for the benefit of that bhikkhu, desiring to arouse a sense of urgency, approached that bhikkhu. Having approached that bhikkhu, he addressed him with verses.

Get up, bhikkhu, why lie down?
What benefit is there for
you by sleeping?
Indeed what sleep could
there be for the one
afflicted,
for the one oppressed,
pierced by the dart?

upaṭṭhānasuttaṃ

ekaṃ samayaṃ añ-
ñatāro bhikkhu kosa-
lesu viharati aññata-
rasmiṃ vanasaṇḍe.
tena kho pana sa-
mayena so bhikkhu
divāvihāragato su-
pati. atha kho yā tas-
miṃ vanasaṇḍe adhi-
vatthā devatā tassa
bhikkhuno anukam-
pikā atthakāmā taṃ
bhikkhuṃ saṃveje-
tukāmā yena so bhik-
khu tenupasaṅkami.
upasaṅkamtivā taṃ
bhikkhuṃ gāthāhi
ajjhabhāsi:

uṭṭhehi bhikkhu kiṃ
sesi¹,
ko attho supinena²
te;
āturassa hi kā³ niddā,
sallaviddhassa rup-
pato.

That faith with which
you went forth,
from the home life into
homelessness;
nurture just that faith,
don't come under sloth's
control.

Sensual pleasures are
impermanent, unstable,
though the dullard is
enthralled with them;
freedom from the khand-
has, being detached,

is why one gone forth
[should be] ardent.

The removal of lustful
desire,
the going beyond of ignorance;
that knowledge of the
highest cleansing,
is why one gone forth
[should be] ardent.

Having broken up ignorance by noble knowl-
edge,

yāya saddhā⁴ pabba-
jito,
agārasmānagāriyaṃ;
tameva saddhaṃ brū-
hehi,
mā niddāya vasaṅga-
mīti.

aniccā addhuvā kāmā,

yesu mando'va muc-
chito;
khandhesu⁵ muttaṃ
asitaṃ,
kasmā pabbajitaṃ
tape.

chandarāgassa vi-
nayaṃ,
avijjāsamattikkamā,
taññāṇaṃ paramavo-
dānaṃ⁶,
kasmā pabbajitaṃ
tape.

bhetvā⁷ avijjaṃ vij-
jāya,
āsavānaṃ parikkhayā;

the extinction of the
 asavas;
 being sorrowless, without
 despair,
 is why one gone forth
 [should be] ardent.

With energy aroused,
 resolute,
 always firm in exertion;
 aspiring to attain Nib-
 bana,
 is why one gone forth
 [should be] ardent.

asokaṃ anupāyāsaṃ,
 kasmā pabbajitaṃ
 tape.

āraddhaviriyaṃ pahi-
 tattaṃ,
 niccaṃ daḥhaparakka-
 maṃ;
 nibbānaṃ abhikaṇ-
 khantaṃ,
 kasmā pabbajitaṃ tapeti.

