

0.0.1 Kusinara

0. Source: Savatthi.

1. Of the direction, O bhikkhus, where the bhikkhus dwell quarrelsome, disputatious, contentious, stabbing one another with the daggers of the mouth, even to direct my mind to this direction, O bhikkhus, is discomfoting, let alone to go there. I reach this conclusion here: “Certainly, those venerables have abandoned these three dhammas. They have cultivated these three dhammas.”
2. What are the three dhammas they have abandoned? Thoughts of renunciation, thoughts of non-ill-will, thoughts of non-harming. These are the three dhammas that they have abandoned.
3. What are the three dhammas they have cultivated? Thoughts of sensual desire, thoughts of ill-will, thoughts of harming. These are the three dhammas that they have cultivated.
4. Of the direction, O bhikkhus, where the bhikkhus dwell quarrelsome, disputatious, contentious, stabbing one another with the daggers of the mouth, even to direct my mind to this direction, O bhikkhus, is discomfoting, let alone to go there. I reach this conclusion here: “Certainly, those venerables have abandoned these three dhammas. They have cultivated these three dhammas.”

5. Of the direction, O bhikkhus, where the bhikkhus dwell harmonious, friendly, without quarrel, blending like milk and water, beholding each other dear, even to go to this direction, O bhikkhus, is comforting, let alone to direct my mind there. I reach this conclusion here: "Certainly, those venerables have abandoned these three dhammas. They have cultivated these three dhammas."

6. What are the three dhammas they have abandoned? Thoughts of sensual desire, thoughts of ill-will, thoughts of harming. These are the three dhammas that they have abandoned.

7. What are the three dhammas they have cultivated? Thoughts of renunciation, thoughts of non-ill-will, thoughts of non-harming. These are the three dhammas that they have cultivated.

8. Of the direction, O bhikkhus, where the bhikkhus dwell harmonious, friendly, without quarrel, blending like milk and water, beholding each other dear, even to go to this direction, O bhikkhus, is comforting, let alone to direct my mind there. I reach this conclusion here: "Certainly, those venerables have abandoned these three dhammas. They have cultivated these three dhammas."