

0.1 The Rebuke of Mara

māratajjaniyasuttaṃ

1. Thus, was heard by me. At one time, the venerable Mahamoggallana was dwelling among the Bhaggas at the Suṃsumaragira Bhesakala Grove, the Deer Park. At that time the venerable Mahamoggallana was walking up and down in the open air.

2. At that time Mara, the Evil One, having entered the venerable Mahamoggallana's stomach, went into his intestines. Then this occurred to the venerable Mahamoggallana: Why is my stomach so heavy? It is as if I am pregnant, I think. So then, the venerable Mahamoggallana having descended from his walking path, having entered his dwelling, sat down on a prepared seat. Having sat down, the venerable Mahamoggallana attended to the root source internally.

Come out, O Evil One. Do not harass the Tathagata. Do not harass the Tathāgata’s disciples. Let this not lead to your harm and suffering for a long time.”

It occurred to you thus: “This samana surely does not know me. He does not see me when he says thus: “Come out, O Evil One. Come out, O Evil One. Do not harass the Tathagata. At that time, O Evil One, the Auspicious One Kakusandha, the Arahant, the rightly self-awakened one, had arisen in the world. The Auspicious One Kakusandha, the Arahant, the rightly self-awakened one, O Evil One, had a pair of disciples named Vidhura and Sanjiva, the foremost auspicious pair. Among all of the disciples of the Auspicious One Kakusandha, the Arahant, the rightly self-awakened one, O Evil One, there were certainly not any of them who could match the venerable Vidhura in this case, namely the exposition of cessation of perception and feeling. Once upon a time, O Evil One, the venerable Sanjiva having sat under the root of a certain tree, entered upon the cessation of perception and feeling. The cowherds, shepherds, farmers, and passersby, O Evil One, saw the venerable Sanjiva seated under the root of a certain tree having entered upon the cessation of perception and feeling. Having seen, this occurred to them: “It is marvellous indeed, Sir. It is unprecedented indeed, Sir. This samana has passed away sitting just here. Well now, let’s cremate him.” So then, O Evil One, those cowherds, shepherds, farmers, and passersby, having collected grass, pieces of wood and cowdung, having heaped them up over the venerable Sanjiva’s body, having set it on fire, they departed. Then, O Evil One, when the night had passed, the venerable Sanjiva, having emerged from that attainment, having shaken out his robes, having dressed in the morning, having taken his bowl and outer robe, entered the village for alms food. Those cowherds, shepherds, farmers, and passersby, having seen the venerable Sanjiva wandering in search of alms food, this occurred to them: “It is marvellous indeed, Sir. It is unprecedented indeed, Sir. This samana passed away just sitting down. Now this person has come back to life.” In this way, O Evil One, by this method, the venerable Sanjiva came to have the designation Sanjiva.

Hopefully while you are honoring, esteeming, respecting and worshiping, the bhikkhus who are virtuous in conduct, pleasant in habits, there might be some alteration in their mind, whereby Mara Dusi might gain an opening.” Then, O Evil One, those brahmins and house holders, being possessed by Mara Dusi, honored, esteemed, respected and worshiped the bhikkhus who were virtuous in conduct, pleasant in habits. Now at that time, O Evil One, the majority of those humans, with the breakup of the body, after death, mostly arose in a happy destination, a heavenly world.

Then, O Evil One, the Auspicious One Kakusandha, the Arahant, the rightly self-awakened one, addressed the bhikkhus: “The brahmins and house holders, O bhikkhus, have been possessed by Mara Dusi, saying: “Come, all of you. Honor, esteem, respect and worship the bhikkhus who are virtuous in conduct, pleasant in habits. Hopefully while you are honoring, esteeming, respecting and worshiping the bhikkhus who are virtuous in conduct, pleasant in habits, there might be some alteration in their mind, whereby Mara Dusi might gain an opening.” Come, O bhikkhus. 16. Then one morning, O Evil One, the Auspicious One Kakusandha, the Arahant, the rightly self-awakened one, having dress, having taken bowl and outer robe, entered the village for alms food with the venerable Vidhura as his attendant. So then, O Evil One, Mara Dusi having possessed a certain boy, having siezed a stone, gave a blow to the venerable Vidhura's head and cut his head open. So then, O Evil One, with his head cut with blood dripping, the venerable Vidhura just followed behind the Auspicious One Kakusandha, the Arahant, the rightly self-awakened one. Then, O Evil One, the Auspicious One Kakusandha, the Arahant, the rightly self-awakened one, having turned around his whole body, looked at Mara Dusi with the elephant look and said: "This Mara Dusi does not recognize his measure." And having looked with that elephant look, O Evil One, Mara Dusi fell away right there and arose in the great hell.

17. Now, O Evil One, there are three names for that great hell, the six domains for contact proper, the meeting together of iron stakes proper, to be experienced by oneself proper. So Then, O Evil One, the hell wardens having approached, said this: “Good man, when stake meet stake in your heart, then you would know that you have been roasting in hell for a thousand years.” For many years, O Evil One, for many hundreds of years, for many thousands of years, for many hundreds of thousands of years, I roasted in that great hell. For ten thousand years I also roasted in the subsidiary of that great hell called, “Emergence from feeling.” My body, O Evil One, was that of a human but my head was that of a fish.
