

0.0.1 The Major Exposition on Dhamma Undertakings

1. Thus was heard by me. At one time the Auspicious One was dwelling at Savatthi in Jeta's Grove, Anathapindika's Park. At that place the Auspicious One addressed the bhikkhus: "Bhikkhus." "Bhante," those bhikkhus replied to the Auspicious One. The Auspicious One said this:

2. "The majority of beings, O bhikkhus, mostly have such a liking, such a desire, such a yearning: "O, that unwished for, disagreeable, unpleasing things would diminish and wished for, agreeable, pleasing things would increase. For those beings, O bhikkhus, having such a liking, such a desire, such a yearning, unwished for, disagreeable, unpleasing things increase and wished for, agreeable, pleasing things diminish. Therein, O bhikkhus, what do you posit to be the cause?" The Auspicious One, O Bhante, is our root for the Dhamma. The Auspicious One is our guide. The Auspicious One is our refuge. Certainly, please let the meaning of this statement be only evident to the Auspicious One. Having heard of this from the Auspicious One, the bhikkhus will bear it in mind." Well then, O bhikkhus, listen to that and do mind it well, I will speak." "Yes Bhante," those bhikkhus replied to the Auspicious One. The Auspicious One said this:

With the breakup of the body, after death, he arises in the lower world, unhappy destination, the woeful plane, hell. This, O bhikkhus, is called the undertaking of things that is pleasant now but results in future pain.

23. These, O bhikkhus, are the four undertakings of things.

24. Suppose, O bhikkhus, there were a bitter gourd mixed with poison. A man would come along with a liking for life, a liking for existence, a liking for happiness, aversive to pain. They would say to him thus: "This bitter gourd, good man, is mixed with poison. Drink it if you wish. Indeed while drinking, the color, the aroma and also the flavor will be disagreeable to you. And having drunk it, you will meet with death or deadly suffering." He would hurriedly, without reflection, drink that beverage and not relinquish it. While drinking, the color, the aroma and also the flavor will be disagreeable to him. And having drunk it, he would meet with death or deadly suffering. In a similar way, I say, O bhikkhus, is this which is the undertaking of things that is painful now and also results in future pain.

25. Suppose, O bhikkhus, a beverage in a bronze vessel would be endowed with color, aroma, and flavor but mixed with poison. A man would come along with a liking for life, a liking for existence, a liking for happiness, aversive to pain. They would say to him thus: "This beverage in the bronze vessel, Good man, is endowed with color, aroma, and flavor but mixed with poison. Drink it if you wish. But having drunk it, he would meet with death or deadly suffering.”. In a similar way, I say, O bhikkhus, is this which is the undertaking of things that is pleasant now but results in future pain.

26. Suppose, O bhikkhus, a stinking urine would be mixed with various medicines. Then a man would come along afflicted with jaundice. They would say to him thus: “This stinking urine, Good man, is mixed with various medicines. Drink it if you wish. Indeed while drinking, the color, the aroma and also the flavor will be disagreeable to you. But having drunk it, you will be at ease.” Having reflected, he would drink it and not relinquish it. While drinking, the color, the aroma and also the flavor will be disagreeable to him. But having drunk it, he would be at ease. In a similar way, I say, O bhikkhus, is this which is the undertaking of things that is painful now but results in future pleasure.

27. Suppose, O bhikkhus, there would be curd, honey, butter and molasses mixed together. Then a man would come along afflicted with dysentery. They would say to him thus: “This, Good man, is curd, honey, butter and molasses mixed together. Drink it if you wish. Indeed while drinking, the color, the aroma and also the flavor will give you pleasure. And having drunk it, you will be at ease.” Having reflected, he would drink it and not relinquish it. While drinking, the color, the aroma and also the flavor would give him pleasure. And having drunk it, he would be at ease. In a similar way, I say, O bhikkhus, is this which is the undertaking of things that is pleasant now and also results in future pleasure.

28. “Just as, O Bhikkhus, in the autumn, when the sky is clear and cloudless, the sun, rising in the sky, dispels all darkness from space as it shines, radiates and illuminates. So too, O bhikkhus, this which is the undertaking of things that is pleasant now and also results in future pleasure, dispels the doctrines of the common samanas and brahmanas as it shines, radiates and illuminates.”

29. This is what the Auspicious One said. Delighted, those bhikkhus rejoiced in the Auspicious One’s words.
