1. Then the bhikkhu Kokalika visited with the Auspicious One. Upon arrival, having bowed down to the Auspicious One, he sat down to one side. Having sat down to one side, the bhikkhu Kokalika said this to the Auspicious One: “Sariputta and Moggallana, O Bhante, have evil wishes, they have come under the control of evil wishes.”

2. “Indeed not so, Kokalika, indeed not so, Kokalika. Have a trusting mind, O Kokalika, in Sariputta and moggallāna, Sariputta and Moggallana are well-behaved.”

3. Also for a second time, the bhikkhu Kokalika said this to the Auspicious One: “Although for me, O Bhante, the Auspicious One is reliable and trustworthy. But Sariputta and Moggallana, O Bhante, have evil wishes, they have come under the control of evil wishes.”

4. “Indeed not so, Kokalika, indeed not so, Kokalika. Have a trusting mind, O Kokalika, in Sariputta and moggallāna, Sariputta and Moggallana are well-behaved.”

5. Also for a third time, the bhikkhu Kokalika said this to the Auspicious One: “Although for me, O Bhante, the Auspicious One is reliable and trustworthy. But Sariputta and Moggallana, O Bhante, have evil wishes, they have come under the control of evil wishes.”

6. “Indeed not so, Kokalika, indeed not so, Kokalika. Have a trusting mind, O Kokalika, in Sariputta and moggallāna, Sariputta and Moggallana are well-behaved.”

7. Then the bhikkhu Kokalika, having risen up from his seat, having bowed down, having circumambulated the Auspicious One, he departed. Not long after the bhikkhu Kokalika had departed, boils the size of mustard seeds spread all over his body. Having been the size of mustard seeds, they came to be the size of mung beans. Having been the size of mung beans, they came to be the size of chickpeas. Having been the size of chickpeas, they came to be the size of jujubi pip. Having been the size of jujubi pip, they came to be the size of jujubi fruits. Having been the size of jujubi fruits, they came to be the size of myrobalan fruits. Having been the size of myrobalan fruits, they came to be the size of unripened wood apple. Having been the size of unripened wood apple, they came to be the size of wood apple. Having been the size of wood apple, they busted open, oozing pus and blood. Then he just layed on plantain leaves like a fish that has swallowed poison.

8. Then Tudu, the independent Brahma, approached the bhikkhu Kokalika. Having approached, he stood in the sky and said this to the bhikkhu Kokalika: “Have a trusting mind, O Kokalika, in Sariputta and moggallāna, Sariputta and Moggallana are well-behaved.”

9. “Who are you, friend?”

10. “I am Tudu, the independent Brahma.”

11. Have you not, O friend, been declared by the Auspicious One as a non-returner? Why have you now come here [in this world]? See the extent to which this wrong is done by you.

12. Then Tudu, the independent Brahma addressed the bhikkhu Kokalika in verses:

Indeed when a man is born,
he is born with a knife in his mouth;
with which he cuts himself,
with foolish, badly-spoken speech.

He who praises one who is blameworthy,
or blames one who is praiseworthy;
casts with his mouth an unlucky throw,
by which from that loss, he gains no happiness.

Insignificant is this loss,
which one loses all of one's wealth;

everything one owns, including oneself,
just this is a greater loss;
he who has a corrupted mind against the holy
ones.

For a hundred thousand nirabbudas,
thirty six and five abbudas;
revilers of the noble ones enter hell,
having been directed there by evil-minded
speech.

13. Then the bhikkhu Kokalika passed away due to that very illness. But since he died with a resentful mind towards Sariputta and Moggallana, the bhikkhu Kokalika arose in the Paduma hell.

14. Then when the night had advanced, the Brahma Sahampati, with unsurpassable beauty, having illuminated the whole Jetavana, visited with the Auspicious One. Upon arrival, having bowed down to the Auspicious One, he stood to one side. Having stood to one side, the Brahma Sahampati said this to the Auspicious One: “The bhikkhu Kokalika, O Bhante, has passed away. Having passed away, O Bhante, with a resentful mind towards Sariputta and Moggallana, the bhikkhu Kokalika has arisen in the Paduma hell.” That is what the Brahma Sahampati said. Having said this, having bowed down, having circumambulated the Auspicious One, he disappeared right there.

15. Then when the night had passed, the Auspicious One addressed the bhikkhus. This night, O bhikkhus, the Brahma Sahampati, with unsurpassable beauty, having illuminated the whole Jetavana, visited me. Upon arrival, having bowed down to me, he stood to one side. Having stood to one side, the Brahma Sahampati said this to me: “The bhikkhu Kokalika, O Bhante, has passed away. Having passed away, O Bhante, with a resentful mind towards Sariputta and Moggallana, the bhikkhu Kokalika has arisen in the Paduma hell.” That is what the Brahma Sahampati said. Having said this, having bowed down, having circumambulated me, he disappeared right there.

16. When thus was said, a certain bhikkhu said this to the Auspicious One: How long, O Bhante, is the life-span in the Paduma hell? Long, O bhikkhu is the life-span in the Paduma hell. It is not that easy to calculate as: “this many years”, or “this many hundreds of years” or “this many thousands of years” or “this many hundreds of thousands of years.”

17. But is it possible, O Bhante, to give a simile?

18. It is possible, Bhikkhu, said the Auspicious One.

19. Suppose, O bhikkhu, there were twenty kharika measures of Kosalan cartload of sesame seeds. Then with the lapse of every one hundred years, a man would pull out one sesame seed from that. More quickly, O bhikkhu, would that twenty kharika measures of Kosalan cartload of sesame seeds go to exhaustion, be used up, than [the life-span of] just one Abbuda hell.

20. “Twenty Abbuda hells, O bhikkhu, is just as one Nirabbuda hell. Twenty Nirabbuda hells, O bhikkhu, is just as one Ababa hell. Twenty Ababa hells, O bhikkhu, is just as one Ahaho hell. Twenty Ahaho hells, O bhikkhu, is just as one Ahaha hell. Twenty Ahaha hells, O bhikkhu, is just as one Atata hell. Twenty Atata hells, O bhikkhu, is just as one Kumuda hell. Twenty Kumuda hells, O bhikkhu, is just as one Sogandhika hell. Twenty Sogandhika hells, O bhikkhu, is just as one Uppalaka hell. Twenty Uppalaka hells, O bhikkhu, is just as one Pundarika hell. Twenty Pundarika hells, O bhikkhu, is just as one Paduma hell. And it is in the Paduma hell that the bhikkhu Kokalika has arisen for having a resentful mind towards Sariputta and Moggallana.”

21. This is what the Auspicious One said. Having said this, the Well-farer, the Teacher, further said this:

Indeed when a man is born,
he is born with a knife in his mouth;
with which he cuts himself,
with foolish, badly-spoken speech.

He who praises one who is blameworthy,

or blames one who is praiseworthy;
casts with his mouth an unlucky throw,
by which from that loss, he gains no happiness.

Insignificant is this loss,
which one loses all of one's wealth;
everything one owns, including oneself,
just this is a greater loss;
he who has a corrupted mind against the holy
ones.

For a hundred thousand nirabbudas,
thirty six and five abbudas;
revilers of the noble ones enter hell,
having been directed there by evil-minded
speech.
